What to Do Next?

It may be safely assumed that all persons who study

Musical Primers, or Catechisms, are BEGINNERS in musical study. Such ones may need advice as to the Next Thing to Do, after the elements are mastered.

It is always a sound and wise thing to do to take lessons of a good teacher, that is if one's object is to be a singer or player.

If, however, the object is merely to get to understand music in a general way, to be able to enjoy it, and to talk about it without making mistakes, then

Take a Course of Musical Reading.

For 75 cents, DITSON & Co. will mail to you a copy of

FIVE THOUSAND MUSICAL TERMS.

BY J. S. ADAMS.

With this in your hand, there need be no more trouble about the meaning of any musical term.

For $4.00, DITSON & Co. will mail you a copy of the celebrated

STAINER AND BARRETT'S DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL TERMS.

This is a large and handsome book, not properly a Dictionary, but an ENCYCLOPEDIA, with long articles, giving full information, in the most interesting way, on all musical subjects. There are hundreds of pictorial and musical illustrations.

For $2.50, DITSON & Co. will mail you

RITTER'S STUDENT'S HISTORY OF MUSIC,

admirably written, covering the whole subject, and giving in a most interesting way a narrative of all important musical events during the last 2000 years.

Chord Music, and How to Play It,

ON THE PIANO OR ORGAN.

When one plays, on the piano, the letters C, D, E, F, G, A, B, C, that constitutes a Scale. But if one plays, skipping every other letter, as C—E—G—B—D—F—A, that is an Arpeggio; and if one plays three or more letters of an Arpeggio at once, that makes a Chord; so called because the letters chord well, or sound well together. If we play three of these letters at once, that makes a Triad. C E G, or E G B, or G B D, are Triads. If we play four letters at once, as C E G B, that is a Chord of the Seventh; and if we play five letters at once, as C E G B D, that is a Chord of the Seventh and Ninth.

Although there are only a few chords used in music, and although one can learn all about them in a short time, one must read chord music and practice it a long time in order to play or read it with perfect ease.

There is no better book for teaching Chord Music than

Johnson's New Method of Thorough Bass.

By A. N. Johnson. Price $1.00.

The explanations in this book are remarkably simple and clear.

By studying them, and by a patient practice of the numerous chords in the lessons, one cannot fail to become familiar with and able to play all Church Music, Sunday School Music, School Songs, (which generally need a chord accompaniment,) and the Chords which are so numerous in all songs; also all Glees and Part Songs.

After one has learned the construction of Chords, and how to play them, it is natural to wish to know how to compose music, using Chords. To do this, use

Johnson's New Method of Harmony.

By A. N. Johnson. Price $1.00.

A book as easy as it is possible to make a book on Composition.

Any book mailed for the Retail price.

INTRODUCTION.

The method adopted in this work is to give to each word, or musical term, the pronunciation peculiar to the language to which it belongs. It is admitted that it is not unfrequently impossible to express with precision the native pronunciation of foreign languages with English letters, but even in such cases much will be gained by an approximation to the true sound. For the sake of brevity the English terms are, for the most part, only defined, without adding the pronunciation.

One of the most difficult as well as important of the points to be made is that of placing the accent upon the proper syllable. But it is to be borne in mind that in most of the European languages the stress of voice is not thrown so exclusively upon a single syllable as it is in English; and, as a natural consequence, the unaccented syllables are almost invariably pronounced more distinctly than by us. This is specially true in the Italian, French and Spanish languages. In important cases accent is indicated in the word, as pronounced, by placing the accented syllable in Italics.

In the Latin and Greek languages it has been deemed advisable to follow what is known as the Continental pronunciation, in preference to the English pronunciation which is adopted in some of our principal Colleges; since it is only by this means that we can conform at all to the usual pronunciation of the same terms by the principal European nations. In this connection it is proper to add, that the Latin words employed in the Catholic church service, as in the Mass, etc., are frequently made to conform to the Italian mode of pronunciation. Thus: Dominus, Dŏm-ē-noos; pacem, pä-tshĕm; etc.; but as this system has not been universally adopted by the church choirs of this country, it has seemed best to preserve a uniformity in the pronunciation of all Latin or Greek words, and accordingly no such distinction has been made.

In the preparation of this work, the aim has been rather to practical utility than to great fullness and extent, and no hesitation was felt in discarding over two thousand (so called) musical terms which have appeared in recent publications, as being both useless and illegitimate.

RULES

FOR THE

PRONUNCIATION OF THE PRINCIPAL MODERN LANGUAGES.

GERMAN.

VOWELS.

A has the sound of ä as in far.

Au is like ou in house.

Ai occurs but rarely, and has the sound of ī as in pine.

Ae or ä when long is like ā in mate; when short it is like ĕ in met.

Aeu or aü is like oy in boy.

E has (1) the sound of ĕ as in help, and (2) the sound of ā in hate.

Ei has always the sound of ī in pine.

Eu is like oi in loiter.

I has the sound of ĭ as in pin.

Ie takes the sound of ē as in tree.

O has (1) a long sound as in tone, and (2) a short sound as in loss.

Oe or ö has the sound of ō as in dove.

U has the sound of oo as in moon.

Ue or ü has the sound of the French ü.

Y is used only in foreign words, where it does not differ from i.

CONSONANTS.

B and d are pronounced as in English.

C is only used in foreign words. Before e, i and y it is pronounced like ts; before other vowels and consonants it is like k.

Ch has nothing corresponding to it in English. It has two sounds; when following a, o, u or au it is a gutteral and similar to the Scotch word Loch; but when it occurs after e, ei, i, ä, ö, au, eu or ü it has a soft palatal aspirate which may be represented by the combinations kh. At the beginning of words ch is like k.

Chs is pronounced like ks or x.

F, l, m, p, t and x are the same as in English.

G has the hard sound as in got. In some parts of Germany the unaccented, final ig is softened into something like ikh.

H at the beginning of words is aspirated; between two vowels the aspiration is very weak, and before a consonant or at the end of words it is mute; but in this case it makes the preceding vowel long.

J is equivalent to the English y in yet, and is always followed by a vowel.

K is like the English k, but is never mute before n.

Ng sounds like ng in length; but in compound words where the first ends in n and the last begins with g, they are separated.

Q is always joined with u, and together they are pronounced like kw.

Ph has the sound of f.

Pf unites the two letters in one sound uttered with compressed lips.

R has a stronger sound than in English, and is the same at the beginning, middle or end of a word.

S is like the English s. It is sounded at the end of words, and between two vowels it frequently takes the sound of z.

Sch is like the English sh in ship.

Th takes always the sound of t; h being silent. It has never the sound of th in thee.

Tz intensifies the sound of z.

V is pronounced like f.

W answers to the English v.

Z is pronounced like ts in nets.

In the German words defined and pronounced in this work, the accented syllable, in words of two or more, will be in Italics.

N. B. For the sake of greater uniformity, most of the German substantives, in the words to be defined in the following pages, are made to conform to English usage by not capitalizing the initial letter.

ITALIAN.

VOWELS.

A is always like ä in father.

E has (1) the sound of ĕ in pen, and (2) the sound of ā in fate.

I is pronounced like ē in me.

J is always a vowel and at the beginning of a syllable is like y in you. At the end of a word it is like ē in be.

O has the sound (1) of ŏ in tone; and (2) that of ŏ in not.

U has always the sound of oo in cool.

CONSONANTS.

B, d, f, l, n, p, q, v, are the same as in English.

C, before a, o and u, has the sound of k; before e, i, and y it has the sound of tsh, or that of ch in the word cheek. When doubled (cc) and followed by e, i, or y, the first is pronounced like t and the second takes its usual sound.

Ch, before e or i, has the sound of k.

G, before a, o, or u, is hard as in go; before e, or i, it has the sound of j or soft g as in gem. When doubled and followed by e, or i, it has the sound of dj; or like dg in lodge.

Gh, followed by e, or i, is pronounced like g in go.

Gl, followed by i preceding another vowel, is pronounced like ll in million.

Gn, followed by a, e, i, o, or u, is like ni in the English word minion.

Gua, gue, gui, are pronounced gwä, gwā, gwē.

Gia, gio, giu, are pronounced djiä, djiō, djioo, in one syllable, giving the i a very faint sound.

S has (1) the hard sound as in sis, and (2) the soft sound as in ease; usually the latter when occurring between two vowels.

Sc, before e, or i, is like sh in shall; before a, o, or u, it has the sound of sk.

Sch is always like sk, or sch in school.

Scia, scio, sciu, are pronounced shä, shō, shoo.

R, at the beginning of words, is like the English; but at the end of words or syllables, or when combined with another consonant, it should have a rolling sound.

W and x are not found in Italian, except in foreign words.

Z has usually the sound of ts; it is sometimes pronounced like dz.

Italian words are pronounced exactly as written, there being no silent letter except h. The vowels always preserve their proper sounds, forming no dipthongs and being uninfluenced by the consonants with which they may be combined.

In words of two or more syllables there is usually a slight emphasis placed on the penult or ante-penult, but rarely on the last syllable.

FRENCH.

VOWELS.

A has two sounds; ä as in mass and ă as in bar.

Ai is like ā in fate.

Au is similar to o in English.

E is (1) like ĕ in met; (2) like ā in fate; (3) similar to ŭ in bud. It is frequently silent at the end of words.

Ei is nearly like ā in fate.

Eu resembles ŭ in tub.

I has the sound (1) of ĭ in pin, (2) of ē in me.

Ia has nearly the sound of ia in medial.

Ie is like ee in bee.

O is pronounced like ŏ in rob; and like ō in rope.

U has no equivalent in English, but resembles the sound of e in dew. By prolonging the sound of e, taking care not to introduce the sound of w, we get an approximate sound of the French u, or ū as it will be marked in this work.

Y, when initial, or coming between two consonants, or standing as a syllable by itself, is the same as the French i; but between two vowels it is equivalent to double i, (ii) the first forming a dipthong with the preceding one and the second with the one following.

CONSONANTS.

Final consonants are frequently silent.

B, at the beginning and in the middle of words, is the same as in English.

C has (1) the sound of k before a, o, or u; (2) when written with the cedilla, or before e, or i, it has the sound of s. C final is sounded unless preceded by n.

Ch is pronounced like sh in she. In words derived from the Greek ch is pronounced like k.

D is the same as in English. It is often silent at the end of words.

F is like the English; when final it is usually sounded.

G, before a, o, or u, is hard, as in go; but before e, i, or y, it has the sound of z in the English word azure. In the combination gue, or gui, the u is silent, but the g takes its hard sound.

Gn is pronounced like ni in union.

H is mute or slightly aspirated.

J is pronounced like z in azure.

K has the same sound as in English.

L has (1) the same sound as in English, and (2) the liquid sound as in million.

M and n, when not nasal, have the same sound as in English; if preceded by a vowel in the same syllable, they are always nasal unless immediately followed by a vowel in the next syllable.

Am, an, em, en, are pronounced somewhat like ănh.

Im, in, aim, ain, eim, ein, are pronounced like ănh.

Om and on, are like ŏnh.

Um and un are pronounced like ŭnh.

P is generally the same as in English. It is sometimes silent; and always when at the end of a word.

Q is usually followed by u, in which case they are together sounded like the letter k.

R is given more roughly than in English. It is often silent when preceded by the vowel e.

S has generally the same sound as in English; between two vowels it has generally the same sound as in the English word rose.

Sc is the same as in English. S final is generally silent.

T has its hard English sound, but in tial, tiel, and tion, it has the sound of s.

Th is always the same as t alone. T final is usually silent.

V is like the English, only a little softer.

W is found only in foreign words, and is pronounced like v.

X, initial, is pronounced like gz; it occurs but in few words.

Ex, at the beginning of words, is sounded like egz. In other places and between two vowels it is pronounced like ks.

Z is like z in zone.

Final consonants, which would otherwise be silent, are frequently sounded by carrying them over to the next word when commencing with a vowel.

SPANISH.

VOWELS.

A is pronounced as ä in ah.

E is generally pronounced like a in mate; but, when followed by n, r, s, or z, it takes the short sound of ĕ as in met.

I is pronounced like ē as in me, and sometimes like i as in pin.

O takes the same form of pronunciation as in English. It is long as in nō, short as in nŏt, or close as in glōve.

U is pronounced like oo; the only exception to this rule being in syllables, gue, gui, que, qui, when the u becomes silent unless written with two dots over it; thus, ü.

Y is sometimes a vowel and sometimes a consonant. When followed by another vowel it usually unites and forms a dipthong; in most other cases it is a consonant, similar to j in English.

Ay is like the Spanish i.

Ei is the same as i.

Oy and uy are pronounced as oi.

CONSONANTS.

B, at the beginning of a word is like the English; but when occurring between two vowels it is sometimes softened to v. (This is done by Mexicans, however, and is not regarded as pure Castilian.)

C, before e or i, has the sound of th in thin; but followed by a, o, or u, it has the sound of k. When doubled and followed by e, or i, the first is hard and the second soft.

D, at the beginning of a word is the same as in English; but between two vowels it has a peculiar sound not perfectly represented by English characters, but similar to th in thee. At the end of a word it has a lisping sound.

F is pronounced as in English.

G, before a, o, u, l, or r, is pronounced as in English; before e, or i, it is an aspirate, as he, hi.

H is usually a mute, but is slightly aspirated before ue.

Ch is pronounced as in the English word cheek.

J is a strong aspirate and is equivalent to the Spanish g before e, or i.

L is pronounced as in English. When double (ll) the last takes the sound of y as in million.

M is the same as the English.

N is like the English, but when it is written ñ, it is pronounced as in the English word minion.

P and q are pronounced as in English; qu has sometimes the sound of k, the u being mute.

R, at the beginning of words or syllables should be pronounced more roughly than in English; when doubled it is given very harshly.

S has always the hissing sound.

T is pronounced as in tart, tin.

V is the same as in English.

X is similar to ks in English.

Z is only used before a, o, or u, and is always pronounced with the lisping sound of th; it is the same after a vowel.

In Spanish particular care should be taken to pronounce the letters c, d, r, s, at the end of words.

The accent usually falls on the final syllable when the word ends with a consonant. Substantives, ending with a vowel, have usually the accent upon the penultimate or last syllable but one. As exceptions to these rules it may be said that the plurals of nouns and adjectives, though they take on the s, still retain the same accent as in the singular.

SWEDISH.

VOWELS.

A is like the German.

E has the sound of long ā at the beginning of words, when making a syllable by itself, and at the end of words. It has the sound of short ĕ, as in met, when followed by f, l, m, n, r, or s.

I is like the German.

O is like oo at the beginning of a word, in a syllable by itself, and at the end of a word or syllable. It has the sound of long ō when followed by f, l, m, n, r, s, or t.

U is similar to the long ū in English.

Y is like the French ü.

CONSONANTS.

G, before a, o, or u, is hard as in go. When followed by i, or y, it is like the English y.

Gjo and gju are pronounced like yo and yoo.

H is aspirated except before v and j, when it becomes silent.

I is like the English y.

K is hard before a, o, and u; but before i and y it has the sound of ch.

Kj is like the English ch.

Tj has usually the same sound of ch only softer.

The remaining consonants are similar to English.

POLISH.

VOWELS.

A, e and i correspond to the German.

O, when accented, is like oo in English.

U is like the German.

Y is like short I in pin.

CONSONANTS.

B, k, l, m, n, p and r, are like English.

C, ch and w, are like the German.

Cz is like ch in English.

Sc resembles sts. Sz is like the English sh.

DUTCH.

VOWELS.

A, e, i and o have the same sounds as in German.

U has the sound of the French ü.

Y or iz is equivalent to i in mind.

Ui resembles oy in boy.

CONSONANTS.

Consonants are similar to the German, with the following exceptions:

G is always strongly gutteral when combined with h.

Sch is not pronounced like sh, but like sk.

Gh has the hard sound of g as in go.

DANISH.

VOWELS.

A has two sounds, as in ăh and măn.

E has three sounds as in the German.

I, o and u are also like the German.

Y is like the French ü.

CONSONANTS.

D is not sounded after a vowel.

R and w are like the German.

J is like the English y; and the remaining consonants like the same in English.

The Norwegian is similar to Danish, except that d is like the English, and o like the Polish.

HUNGARIAN.

VOWELS.

A, when accented, has the Italian ä; but unaccented has the short sound of ŏ.

E has two sounds as in Italian.

I has the two German sounds.

O is similar to English.

U, accented, has the long sound of ō; unaccented, it is like oo.

CONSONANTS.

C is always joined to some other consonant; cs is like ch, cz is like ts.

G is always hard as in go.

H is always aspirate.

S is like sh; sz is like ss.

T and th are always hard.

Zs is like the French j.

Stop. A register, or row of pipes, in an organ; on the violin, etc., it means the pressure of the finger upon the string.

STOP

Stop, bassoon. A reed stop in an organ resembling the basson in quality of tone.
Stop, claribel. A stop similar to the clarinet stop.
Stop, clarion or octave trumpet. A stop resembling the tone of a trumpet, but an octave higher than the trumpet stop.
Stop, cornet. A stop consisting of five pipes to each note.
Stop, cremona. A reed stop in unison with the diapasons.
Stop, double diapason. An open set of pipes tuned an octave below the diapasons.
Stop, double trumpet. The most powerful reed stop in the organ, the pipes being of the same length as the double diapason, to which it is tuned in unison.
Stop, dulciana. A stop of peculiar sweetness of tone, which it chiefly derives from the bodies of its pipes being longer and smaller than those of the pipes of other stops.
Stop, fagotto. The bassoon stop.
Stop, fifteenth. A stop which derives its name from its pitch, or scale, being fifteen notes above that of the diapason.
Stop, flute. An organ stop resembling in tone a flute or flageolet.
Stops, foundation. The diapasons and principal, to which the other stops, be they few or many, are tuned, and which are absolutely required in an organ.
Stop, hautboy. A reed stop having a tone in imitation of the hautboy.
Stop, larigot, or octave twelfth. A stop the scale of which is an octave above the twelfth. It is only used in the full organ.
Stop, mixture, or furniture. A stop comprising two or more ranks of pipes, shriller than those of the sesquialtera, and only calculated to be used together with that and other pipes.
Stop, nazard. Twelfth stop.
Stop, open diapason. A metallic stop which commands the whole scale of the organ, and which is called open in contradistinction to the stop diapason, the pipes of which are closed at the top.
Stop, organ. A collection of pipes similar in tone and quality, running through the whole, or a great part, of the compass of the organ; a register.
Stop, stopped diapason. A stop the pipes of which are generally made of wood, and its bass, up to middle C, always of wood. They are only half as long as those of the open diapason, and are stopped at the upper end with wooden stoppers, or plugs, which render the tone more soft and mellow than that of the open diapason.
Stoppies. Certain plugs with which the ancients stopped or opened the holes of a flute, before the performance began, in order to accommodate its scale, or range of sounds, to some particular mode or genus.
Stop, principal. A metallic stop, originally distinguished by that name, because holding, in point of pitch, the middle station between the diapason and the fifteenth, it forms the standard for tuning the other stops.

STRA

Stop, salcional. The dulcima stop.
Stops, compound. An assemblage of several pipes in an organ, three, four, five, or more to each key, all answering at once to the touch of the performer.
Stops, draw. Stops in an organ placed on each side of the rows of keys in front of the instrument, by moving which the player opens or closes the stops within the organ.
Stop, sesquialtera. A stop resembling the mixture, running through the scale of the instrument, and consisting of three, four, and sometimes five ranks of pipes, tuned in thirds, fifths, and eighths.
Stops, mutation. In an organ, the twelfth, tierce, and their octaves.
Stop, solo. A stop which may be drawn alone, or with one of the diapasons.
Stops, reed. Stops consisting of pipes upon the end of which are fixed thin, narrow plates of brass, which, being vibrated by the wind from the bellows, produce a reedy thickness of tone.
Stop, stopped unison. The stopped diapason stop.
Stop, tierce. A stop tuned a major third higher than the fifteenth, and only employed in the full organ.
Stop, treble forte. A stop applied to a melodeon, or reed organ, by means of which the treble part of the instrument may be increased in power, while the bass remains subdued.
Stop, tremolo. A contrivance, by means of which a fine, tremulous effect is given to some of the registers of an organ.
Stop, trumpet. A stop so called, because its tone is imitative of a trumpet. In large organs it generally extends through the whole compass.
Stop, twelfth. A metallic stop so denominated from its being tuned twelve notes above the diapason. This stop on account of its pitch, or tuning, can never be used alone; the open diapason, stopped diapason, principal and fifteenth are the best qualified to accommodate it to the ear.
Stop, vox-humana. A stop, the tone of which resembles the human voice.
